about us

Women's Health NSW is the peak body for 20 non-government community based women's health centres in New South Wales.

We promote a coordinated approach to policy and planning, staff professional development and consultation between member services, NSW Ministry of Health and other government and non-government agencies.

Members include 17 women's health centres providing multidisciplinary, primary health care focusing on wellness, prevention, early intervention, immediate and ongoing care including physical health/activity, chronic illness, emotional & mental health, reproductive and sexual health and the health effects of violence against women. Three special purpose services: Waminda with a focus on culturally tailored programs for Aboriginal women, Sydney Women's Counselling Centre with trauma specialised counselling and Rape & Domestic Violence Services Australia. Throughout the network, service provision is influenced by the identified needs of local communities and the shared aim of improving the health of women, with a focus on women experiencing disadvantage.

Strategies incorporated by Women's Health Centres include preventative health care, community education and development, advocacy and empowerment; providing women with knowledge, skills and resources to enable them to take more responsibility over factors that may adversely affect their lives.

All centres work within the social model of health framework which acknowledges the physical, emotional and mental aspects of health as well as the broader social, cultural and economic factors that impact on women's wellbeing and ability to access services.

The Women's Health NSW website outlines our structure, aim, history and philosophy along with project information and annual reporting.

For anyone looking to find their nearest Women's Health Centre, our website www.whnsw.asn.au has an information page on each Women's Health Centre in NSW outlining their contact details and range of service provision.

Contact phone numbers for each Women's Health Centre can also be found on the last page of this report.

our principles

Women's Health NSW works to the NSW State Health Plan: Towards 2021 CORE values of Collaboration, Openness, Respect and Empowerment which resonate with the WHNSW Principles of Women's Health Care endorsed in 1982 and outlined below

- Social justice and an understanding of a gendered approach to health care and policy
- Health is determined by a broad range of social, environmental, economic and biological factors
- Differences in health status are linked to gender, age, socio-economic status, ethnicity, disability, location environment, gender inequality and discrimination
- Health promotion, disease prevention, equity of access to appropriate and affordable services and strengthening the primary health care system are necessary along with high quality illness treatment services
- Information, consultation, advocacy and community empowerment are important elements of the health process
- Dignity, privacy, informed consent, confidentiality and safety
- Informed decision making about health care requires accessible and appropriately targeted information for socio-economic and cultural groups
- Health care is both evidence-based and values women's own knowledge and experience
- Equity and accessibility
- Effective community management
- Links women's individual experience and health needs to the social and cultural context of women's lives
- Empowers women
- Challenges sex-role stereotyping, gender discrimination, racism and homophobia which affect health and well-being
- Increase the accessibility, sensitivity and acceptability of health services for women
- Relates to identified health priorities at the local and state level

NSW Health CORE values

from the CEO

In 2016/17 WHNSW continued its collaborative work with NSW Ministry of Health (MOH) and NSW Health peak bodies as part of the MOH NGO Advisory Committee. Work focused on implementation of the Ministry's Partnerships for Health policy. This year the MOH commissioned Urbis Pty Limited (Urbis) to conduct a Mapping of NSW Women's Health Centres which aimed to establish a detailed understanding of the scope and nature of services provided by Women's Health Centres in NSW and how these services align to state and local priorities and facilitate improvement in women's health.

In conclusion Urbis noted the following:

'The WHC's (Women's Health Centres) and the non-government sector more broadly, offer unique value to consumers, practitioners, and the NSW health system. The centres are providing a multitude of primary health and wellbeing services to a cohort of women who may have otherwise only received care and support via the acute system. Many of the services offered by the centres are underpinned by clinical guidelines or other forms of evidence, and all centres align with women's preferences for care. Centre staff work collaboratively with other organisations to ensure maximum reach and impact within their current funding arrangements, and therefore represent good value to funding bodies, including NSW Health.'

During the process we have continued to work with the women's health sector to identify capacity building opportunities, accreditation strategies, researching evidence based practice, program accountability and data.

In addition, WHNSW has partnered with the University of Sydney and University of New England to conduct research on the NSW Women's Health Sector Model of Service Delivery: Advancing Women's Health Study. The study aims to examine the features of the women's health sector (WHS) model in order to identify and analyse what distinguishes it from mainstream health services. To gain a better understanding of the contribution this specialised services sector makes to the broader health system. The study will be over a three year period.

Our work with the NSW Women's Alliance: Sexual Violence/ Domestic & Family Violence continues to be important. The NSW Women's Alliance brings together a range of agencies with a variety of expertise, knowledge and experience in responding to and working to prevent violence against women and to improve public policy and practice.

Women's Health NSW endorses the 'Uluru Statement From the Heart' to call for the establishment of a 'First Nations Voice' in the Australian Constitution and a 'Makarrata Commission' to supervise a process of 'agreement-making' and 'truth-telling' between governments and Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples.

During the year we continued to manage our ongoing programs; Women's Health Statewide Meetings and Education Program, and the Women's Health NSW Database.

Once again, through the collation of sector service data, WHNSW is able to demonstrate the service provision and demographics of service users across the sector (see pages 10-12). Together women's health centres provided more than 111,401 occasions of service highlighted by the extensive service provision categories spanning more than 189,572 presenting health issues.

Work over the year has extended partnerships and improved policy, procedure and access to services for women and vulnerable communities across NSW. 2016/17 has been a productive year that has influenced the work ahead by identifying strategic directions that will make a difference.

We look forward to continuing partnerships, involvement in the improvement of public policy and practice and a continued unpacking of gender inequity.

Denele Crozier, AM

reducing violence against women

The work of the NGO women's health centres in violence prevention and service provision are an essential part of the NSW primary integrated health care system. From safety planning, medical services, specialist trauma counselling and therapeutic resilience work, legal and financial information, court support, grief and loss counselling, parenting skills, to name but a few current services. The women's health centres are a vital partner to enhance health, safety and well-being outcomes for women who have experienced violence.

This graph includes NSW service statistics from Rape & Domestic Violence Services Australia (RDVSA) representing 28% (7,029) of category 'Adult sexual assault'. Removing these statistics from RDVSA changes the sector total to 18,036 including: Adult child sexual assault 14%; Adult sexual assault 7%; Domestic Violence 61%.

strategic priorities

Women's Health NSW will be proactive on priority issues relevant to women's health:

- 1 Advocating for improved outcomes for women
- 2 Networking and research
- 3 Reorienting the health system

Increase the capacity of the women's health sector to respond to women's health and wellbeing:

- 4 Good governance
- 5 Training and development
- 6 Women's health priority issues

strategic activities

Data and Evaluation Systems

Evaluating the social model of health in service delivery requires a comprehensive approach to statistical data collection. WHNSW developed the WHNSW Database using a Microsoft Access software program as an integrated client management and statistical collection system. The database enables women's health centres to collect consistent information on service delivery and demographics, which can be collated to form a state-wide picture.

Seventeen (17) Women's Health Centres use the WHNSW Women's Health Database. Other centres such as Waminda and Rape and Domestic Violence Services Australia use separate purpose-built databases to reflect their organisations' specific requirements. These centres forward their service data for inclusion in our collated reports.

During 2016/17 WHNSW Finalised Version 3 of the WHNSW Database which incorporates updated reference tables, new group categories and a shift to 'pivot table' report formats. This will enable increased reporting capacity to include cross referencing all data against client demographics. This will in turn enable the sector to compile comprehensive reports for accountability, evaluation and to reflect and demonstrate the needs of the women utilising the services.
